

Our Friends at the Paul J. Lydon Aquatic Center Need Our Help

As many of you are now aware, the Paul J. Lydon Aquatic Center, located behind the Liberty Tree Mall in Danvers, suffered a partial roof collapse on October 21st. They are closed indefinitely until they have a plan developed to rebuild the center.

The family owned and operated business has been a pillar in the greater community for over 30 years, teaching thousands of children how to swim and enjoy the water. They love having such a positive impact on all those lives they touch and the feelings are mutual as seen by some of the comments on their Facebook page :

"You've had such a positive impact on our lives. Such patience in teaching my daughter and all the kids to swim, and at the same time building true friendships and trust with us parents. We love you all so much!"

"So happy you are rebuilding. We'll be there when you are back up and running! Such a wonderful place."

"The Lyndon family has helped generations of families learn to swim in a safe loving environment. Making friendships along the way. Thank you & so glad your rebuilding!"

"I urge everyone to help the family rebuild--after all the good they have done for our communities, all the lessons, all the caring from toddlers to seniors to support of special needs, (and I don't need to tell you how wonderful the family is) we need to band together and help them make it happen."

There are two funds that have been established to help the Lydon family rebuild their building, a place that has become far more than an aquatic center. Because they do not have business interruption coverage, the funds will be used to help with on-going operating and building expenses while there is no income being generated. Any contribution is beneficial and appreciated. Thank you!
